1 Vowel Overview

OBJECTIVE
In this overview, you will learn about the differences between English vowel sounds.

SUMMARY
When we make vowel sounds, the air flows freely. We do not block the air with the lips, teeth, or tongue. We do, however, change the size and shape of the mouth to make different vowel sounds. This section will help you see how and where to make vowel sounds.

Notice

EXERCISE 1
(a) Look at the diagrams. Notice where each vowel sound is made in the mouth.
Where in the mouth are the vowel sounds made?

- Front Vowels
- Central Vowels
- Back Vowels

(b) Listen to the vowel sounds, starting at the top of each diagram. Repeat each sound slowly as you listen. Notice how your tongue and lips move. CD b, Track 2

(c) Listen again and repeat each sound. Circle the sounds that are challenging for you. CD b, Track 2

EXERCISE 2
(a) Circle the correct answers. Look at the Vowel Chart for help.

1. a. Say /u/ as in be. Your tongue is at the front (back) of your mouth.
   b. Say /u/ as in be. Your tongue is at the front (back) of your mouth.

2. a. Put your hands on your cheeks. Say /i/ as in be. Your lips are rounded.
   b. Put your hands on your cheeks. Say /i/ as in be. Your lips are spread.

3. a. Put your hands on your chin. Say /a/ as in in. Your tongue and jaw are high.
   b. Put your hands on your chin. Say /a/ as in in. Your tongue and jaw are low.

(b) Look again at the Vowel Chart. Notice that the location of each vowel sound in the chart relates to the location of your tongue when you make the sound.

Practice

Vowel Chart

We make different vowel sounds by changing the position of the tongue, jaw, and lips. The location of each vowel sound on the chart below shows the tongue and lip position for that vowel in relation to other vowel sounds.

- Front
- Central
- Back

Learning Strategy: Movement

The word elements in this chapter describe movements, such as leading (lead), pulling (pull), and turning (rot). Each element forms at least one English word, so learning them will help you dramatically to expand your vocabulary.

Many of the word elements in this chapter start out describing physical movement, but over the years acquired related, nonphysical meanings. The elements de- (down) and let- (throw) make delet or “throw down.” But the word delet actually means depressed, or how we feel when our mood is “thrown down.”

Circumstances combines the prefix circum- and the root states. Circumstances are things that are “standing” or “standing around” events. Circumstances that might “stand around” and keep you from studying are noise in the library or a friend who wants to talk.

The world of English language teaching

The Practice of English Language Teaching

Varieties of English

There is more than one version of English, of course. In the south of England, many people speak ‘winder’ for wind and ‘water’ for ‘wet’. In the north, one often hears people say ‘spunge’ for sponge and ‘wag’ for wag

Chapter 5

The world of English language teaching

The Practice of English Language Teaching

The world of English language teaching

One kind of English which receives a great deal of attention — and which we have been discussing — is English as a lingua franca. (This is another and more widely used name for what is sometimes called ‘international English’.) English as a lingua franca has become an important part of the English language since World War II and is now the language of international business, science, and technology. It is also the language of many countries where English is not an official language. In these countries, English is used as a second language by many teachers and students. The use of English as a lingua franca has led to the development of new vocabularies and new ways of learning and teaching English. In this chapter, we will look at some of the different aspects of teaching English as a lingua franca.
