<10-13> Read the passage below and answer the questions.

Airplane engines release large amounts of carbon dioxide and other harmful gases into the earth's atmosphere. These chemicals add to the problem of global warming. Many laws have been put in place to make car engines better for the environment, but little has been done to change the damage that aircraft engines make.

Noise pollution is another problem caused by an increase in the amount of airplanes in our skies. In addition to the sound of the large engines, many airplanes produce an extremely loud sound wave. If an airplane is flying at a low altitude, this sound wave can cause big problems for many people. Some governments have placed restrictions on airlines to try to solve these _____. Unfortunately, the demand for air travel means that these pollution issues may only get worse.

Famine has been a major problem in North Korea for many years. Millions of people have become sick or have even died due to a lack of food. The government's failure to control agriculture and food supply in the country is the main problem. Lack of technology and older farming methods have led to famines in the country. In addition, huge floods in 1995 destroyed a large amount of the food being grown in North Korea.

Although the availability of food has improved, _____ is still not self-sufficient. Some experts say that one third of the children in North Korea are sick due to a lack of food. One report suggested that most North Korean people only eat 700 calories a day. North Korea still relies on other countries for food aid. Countries such as South Korea and China continue to donate rice and grain to the country.
